

“Do I Dare to Disturb the Universe?” - celebrate National Poetry Month!

Yes, Dare to Disturb the Universe

Intense, powerful, edgy, real—poetry has the power to get under our skin, to rip us out of our doldrums and experience life anew. In these days of shifts and changes, maybe it’s time to take more risks, not fewer. Jump into the fire, risk everything. “Wild nights, wild nights...” Emily Dickinson urged. Join us on Friday, April 17, 7:30-9:30 PM to celebrate poetry and National Poetry Month at The Bookstore in the Grove, 3399 Virginia Street, #620, Coconut Grove. Celebrate the art of poetry, living poets and our poetry heritage. Come to listen or to read a poem (or two) of original work or by your favorite poet—5-7 min.—and dare to disturb the universe (theme for Natl. Poetry Month 2009). Sponsored by Intl. Institute for Human Understanding/Open U. Info:

www.iihu.org or mikel malone at (305) 281-4089/mikelrm@aol.com

